BARBARA'S SEVERE TEST

Pretty Barbara Ferros would not marry. Her mother was in consterna-

What is the matter with Ernest, the

"He is placid as goat's milk."
"There is little Fritz, the tanner; he is quarrelsome enough for you sure?"
"He is no bigger than a bantam cock.
It is little he could do if the house was set upon by robbers."
That night Fruest, the gupsmith.

knocked early at the door.

"You sent for me, Rarbara," he said, going to the girl who stood upon the hearth, coquettishly warming one pretty foot and then the other.

"Yes, Ernest," she replied, "I've been thinking of what you said the other night when you were here."

"Well, Barbara?"

"I want to test you."

"How?"
"I want to see if you dare do a very disagreeable thing."
"What is it?"
"There is an old coffin up stairs. It smells of inould. They say that Redmond, the murderer was buried in it; but the devil came for his body and left the coffin empty at the end of a week, the comin empty at the end of a week, and it was finally taken from the tomb. It is up stairs in the roam my grandfather died in, and they say grandsire does not resteasy in his grave for some reason, though that I know nothing about. Dare you make that cosin your bed to night?"

Ernest laughed

Ernest laughed.
"Is that all? I will that, and sleep

"Is that all? I will that, and sleep soundly. Why, pretty one, did you think I had weak nerves?"
"Good night, then, I will send a lad to show you the chamber," said imperious Miss Barbara.
Ernest turned straight way and followed the lad in waiting through dim rooms and passages, up echoing stairs, along narrow, damp ways, where rats scutled before them, to a low chamber. The boy looked pale and seared, and scuttled before them, to a low chamber. The boy looked pale and scared, and evidently wanted to hurry away, but Ernest made him wait until he had taken a survey of the room by the aid of his lamp. It was very large and full of recesses, with high windows in them, which were barred across. He remembered that old Grandsire Ferros had been insane for several years before his death, so this precaution had been necessary for the safety of himself and others. In the center of the room stood a coffin; beside it was placed a chair. The room was otherwise perfectly empty.

chair. The room was otherwise perfectly empty.

Ernest stretched bimself in the coffin.
"Be good enough to tell Miss Barbara that it's a very good fit," said he.

The boy went out and shut the door,

Meanwhile Barbara was talking with the big blacksmith in the keeping-room.

"Barney," said she, pulling her hands from his grasp when he should have kissed her, "I have a test to put you through before I give you any answer. There is a corpse lying in the chamber where my grandsire died, in the untenanted wing of the house. If you dare sit with it there all night, and let nothing drive you from your post, you will not ask me to marry you again invain."

"Are these all the conditions you can ofter me, Barbara?"

"All. And if you get frightened you need never look me in the face again."

"I'll take them, then."

So Barney was conducted to his post by the lad, who had been instructed in the secret, and whose involuntary stare at Ernest's placid face as it lay in the coffin was interpreted by Barney to be natural awe of a corpse. He took his seat and the boy left him alone with the darkness, the rate and the coffin. Soon after young Fritz, the tanner, arrived, flattered and hopeful from the fact that Barbara had sent for him.

"Have you changed your mind, Barbara."

"And shall not until I know that you can do a really brave thing."

"What shall it be? I swear to satisfy you, Barbara."

"I have a little proposal to make to you. My plan requires skill as well as courage,"

"Tell me."

the center of the room stood a white figure.

"Curse you, get out of this!" he exclaimed in a fright, using the first words that came to his tongue.

The figure held up its right arm and slowly approached him. He started to his feet. The specter came nearer, pressing him into the corner.

"The d—I take you!" cried Barney, in his extremity.

Involuntarily he stepped back; still the figure advanced, coming nearer and nearer, and extending both arms, as if to take him in a ghastly embrace. The hair started up on Barney's head; he grew desperate, and just as the gleaming arms would kave touched him he fell upon the ghost like a whirlwind, tearing off the sheet, thumping, pounding, beating, and kicking, more and more enraged at the resistance he met, which told him the truth.

As the reader knows, he was big and Fritz.

Looking around they saw the corpse sitting up in his coffin. This was too much. They released each other and sprang for the door. They never knew haw they got out, but they ran home in hot haste, panting like stags.

It was Barbara herself who came and conned the door, upon Friest the next.

"It's very early; one more little nap," said he, turning over in the coffin.

So she married him, and, though she sent Fritz and Barney invitations to the wedding, they did not appear. If they discovered the trick they kept the knowledge to themselves, and never willingly faced Barbara's laughing eyes again.

The output of the several mines for last week aggregated about as follows: 18,000 tons of coal and 5,000 tons of coke. The Fourth will be a day of general pleasure, as the town will have horse racing, base ball, etc. Near here will be an immense picnic by the Farmers' Alliance.

The sale of lots Thursday was in every respect satisfactory to the projectors of the enterprise, The Fairmont Improve-ment Company. This is in the Arnett addition to Fairmon', and contains a number of very desirable lots for dwellings. Seventy-two lots were disposed of at good prices.

The fire in the Clements mines has not been extinguished as it was thought. It will be necessary to flood it, as the mine is full of smoke and gas so that it is impossible to work in it. This mine has large contracts for coal and coke on hand, and this accident wil materially retard them beside being a large loss.

On the stage the tinsel, the glitter, the powder and the paint, show forth the most, but step belind the scenes, and you will behold the truth. The chorus girls are not all "fancy paints them," but rather what they paint themselves; just go with many of the faming advertisements of so-called "catarrh cures." Get back of the scenes, and they are not cures. The real one, and the only cures. The real one, and the only cares. The feat one, is Dr. Sage's Catarrh Remedy. Lift the curtain, and you will find the naked truth to be, that this Remedy is the one that cures the worst cases of Catarrh in the Head, and no mistake. It is also a remedy in all catarrhal conditions, such as Catarrhal Headache, Catarrh of the Throat, etc.

A Fatal Mistaket

Physicians make no more fatal mistake than when they inform patients that nervous heart troubles come from the stomach and are of little consequence. Dr. Franklin Miles, the noted Indiana specialist, has proven the contrary in his new book on "Heart Disease," which may be had free at the Logan Drug Co.'s, who guarantee and recommend Dr. Miles' unequaled New Heart Cure, which has the largest sale of any heart remedy in the world. "Why, nothing is so easy," exclaimed Fritz. "I can scare him away. Furnish me with a sheet, show me the room, and go to your rest. Barbara. You shall find me at the post in the moraing."

Barbara did as required and saw the tanner step blithely away to his task. It was then nearly 12 o clock, and she sought her own chamber.

Barney was sitting at his vigil and so far all had been well.

The face in the coffin gleamed whiter in the darkness. The rats squesked as if a famine were upon them and they simelled dead flesh. The though made him shudder. He got up and walked about, but something made a slight noise, as if somebody was behind him, and he put his chair with its back against the wall, and sat down again. Finally he nodded and snored.

Suddenly it soemed as if somebody had touched him. He awoke with a start, and saw nobody near, though in
